WICHITA MARKETS.

The Receipts of Stock at the Wichita Union Stock Yards for the past 48 Hours Were as Follows: 100 Cattle, 207 Hogs. Shipments: 158 cattle, 232

WICHITA, April 27. The receipts of cattle today were fair, but some went out in first hands without being offered for sale. The offerings were generally medium to fair cattle, some-times good, and sold readily at as good prices as eastern markets warrant buyers paying. On account of the few sold it is hard to determine the state of the market, but sales indicate about steady on good stuffs, and strong on stockers. Common stuffs, traders say, would be lower.

HOGS. The supply of hogs was the smallest foday that it has been for many months, and buyers were greatly disappointed, especially the local packers. Two loads of good hogs sold for $4.75 and $4.80, respectively, but they were better than any thing offered Saturday. The $4.8) hogs averaged 252 pounds and were a fairly smooth load of hogs. Kansas City was off 5@20 cents, and buyers here thought the market would have went down 5@10 cents if there had been stuff to work on. Tops tcAay, $4.80; bulk, $4.50@4.75. Light hogs were in demand, and buyers say they would have paid Saturday's prices.

THE VALUABLE COLLECTION IN THE NEW YORK MUSEUM.

It Contains Dancing Masks, Wonderfully Carved War Clubs, Blood Stained Dagand Maces-Sharks' Teeth Weapons.

The rarest and at the same time the most aluable collection of South sea curiosities in existence, priceless in that in contains specimens which can never be replaced, may be seen in the American Museum of Natural History at Seventy-seventh street and Eighth avenue. It is known as the Sturgis collection, and represents not only an expenditure of thousands of dollars in cash, but nearly twenty-five years of search in the United States and a quest of more than thirty years previous to that time among the islands of the South Pacific Contained in sixteen cases, each 5 feet ing along the entire east side of the third floor of the building, are over 6,000 articles, the greater part of them beautiful, others less so, but all of them quaint and curious and possessing a particular interest for civilized people. Any number of these curiosities represent an epoch in different South Sea islands long passed. Such specimens it is impossible in these days to duplicate. While there is no end to the odd and interesting curiosities in the collection, vet a visitor will find his attention directe ticularly to the masks from New Ireland. New Guinea and Solomon Islands. These were used in former days in religious dances and ceremonies, and were so made that they could be worn over the head. The faces are carved from wood, and hideously ornamented with red and white paint. The upper part consists of a frame work of pliable wood, covered either with native sponge or with sinnet made from

by small green and white periwinkle shells. WEAPONS OF WAR.

From the Solomon, New Hebrides and 1891 New Ireland islands is a large collection of bows and arrows, the former seven or eight and the latter about five feet long. The arrows are tipped with bone or hard wood. No iron is found in the islands, and the wood is hardened by fire to give it the proper degree of strength and resistance. Two particularly interesting but horrible specimens come from New Guinea in the form of daggers made from the bones of human legs. The bones are about seven inches long, the sockets being used as handles, while the other end is sharpened to a point. These ghastly curiosities were captured by the crew of a whaling ship during a fight with the natives of the isiand, and the stains made by human blood can readily be discerned. Specimens of fine carving are very numerous, being especially noticeable in the case of canoe paddles, war clubs and maces used as badges of office on ceremonial occasions. Many are ornamented with mother of pearl or abalone shell. The intricate designs, remarkable for their regularity and finish, are the results of years of slow and careful work, much of the carving having been begun by a father and completed by his son after the death of the former. There being no metal tools in the islands in those days, the carving had all to be done with pieces of shell or with

CENTIFIED CHECKS.

Wonderful specimens of the carver's skill.

It was in the vicinity of this island that the great French navigator, La Perouse, was wrecked. In 1785 King Louis XVI of France sent him to the South seas on a voyage of discovery. No tidings having sent a second expedition, the king sent a second expedition to the South seas in 1791, with instructions to search for the missing explorer. But beyond the fact obtained from some natives that several French sings were wrecked on the island of Santa Cruz in 1788, this being verified by the finding of relies from the missing ships, no further tidings were ever heard of the great French navigator.
